Plates 518–20

Accession Number 86.AE.205

PROVENANCE By 1967–83, Walter and Molly Bareiss (Bareiss number 342; the vase is mentioned in a letter from Sir John Beazley to Walter Bareiss, dated June 16, 1967); 1983–86, the Mary S. Bareiss 1983 Trust; 1986, sold to the J. Paul Getty Museum.

SHAPE AND ORNAMENT Rim slightly convex on top with a vertical overhang; a flat handle plate extending beyond the rim at each side supported by two columns; ovoid body; ogee foot. Palmettes with volutes on the handle plates framed by pairs of vertical lines. Overhang of the rim: a double row of ivy leaves (A) or dots (B) with lines above, below, and between. On the neck: A, black dotted chain of pendant lotus buds between two black lines in a reserved panel; B, black. Figural decoration on the body panels framed by a double row of dots between black lines at the sides and a row of short black tongues on the shoulder at the junction with the neck. Reserved band below. Zone of black rays above foot. Outside of the foot is black, except for the lower part. Resting surface and underside of foot reserved. Interior black.

SUBJECT Top of rim. A. Two pairs of a grazing deer and panther in black silhouette.

B. Two pairs of a grazing goat and panther in black silhouette.

Body. A. Two nude youths walking to right with their horses. They look at one another and each holds a kentron (goad) in his right hand.

B. Athletes training; a nude akontist (javelin thrower) on the left, a trainer (paedotribēs) in the center, and a nude jumper practicing with a pair of weights (haltēres) on the right. The akontist is presented in a three-quarter back view, moving to left while turning his head back toward the trainer. He holds his javelin horizontally in his right hand with his arm outstretched. A freestanding stick is fixed between the akontist and the trainer. The trainer, wearing a himation, stands to right, with his back to the viewer and his head turned left to watch the akontist. He holds a staff in his upraised right hand. The jumper stands to left with his right foot advanced and his arms outstretched in front, holding the haltēres in his hands. Behind and looking up at him, at the right, are the foreparts of a dog in profile. A sponge and a strigil hang at the upper right; a pick rests on the ground.

ATTRIBUTION AND DATE Attributed to Myson by J. D. Beazley. Circa 490–480 B.C.

DIMENSIONS AND CONDITION Height 34 cm; diam. of rim 31.9 cm (outside); diam. of rim 25.7 cm (inside); width with handles 37 cm; diam. of body 31.2 cm; diam. of foot (as restored) 17.1 cm. Capacity to rim 11.124 liters. Reconstructed from several fragments with the joins between fragments filled with plaster and painted. Pitted and abraded in places.

TECHNICAL FEATURES Preliminary sketch. Relief contour. Accessory color. Red: inside rim, line around the vase beneath figured panel, reins and bridle of horses, upper edge of javelin at side B.

The column-krater is the favorite shape of Myson (see *ARV*² 239–42, nos. 18–76; BAPD, s.v. Myson; cf. entry no. 2 [73.AE.135]), and it has been suggested that he was one of the vase-painters responsible for reintroducing the shape into the Attic repertory (C. M. Cardon, “The Berlin Painter and His School” [Ph.D. diss., Institute of Fine Arts, New York University, 1977], p. 72; Mannack, Late Mannerists, pp. 5, 50). The figural scenes are placed in panels as here or are unframed as in entry no. 2 (73.AE.135). For a similar scene and ornament as on A, cf. a column-krater by the same vase-painter in Boston, Museum of Fine Arts 1973.572 (*ARV*² 1638.23 bis; Paralipomena 349; *Beazley Addenda*² 201; Bron, “Chevaux et la danse,” pl. 6.2).

Figures in black silhouette occur more frequently on the overhang of the rim; cf. entry no. 12 (81.AE.161). For rims decorated on top with figures in black silhouette, see K. Schauenburg, “Silene beim Symposion,” JdI 88 (1973): 1–26, esp. 14–20; Mannack, Late Mannerists, p. 63. Cf. the column-krater in Würzburg, Martin von Wagner Museum der Universität L 526 by Myson (*ARV*² 239, 19; 1639; *Beazley Addenda*² 201; Perseus Digital Library Project, Tufts University, <http://www.perseus.tufts.edu/hopper/image?img=Perseus:image:1992.09.0362>), with the same motif on top of the rim, and also the columnkrater in Naples, Museo Archeologico Nazionale MI210 by Myson (*ARV*² 239.18; *Beazley Addenda*² 201; BAPD 202367). Youths leading horses is a popular theme in Attic vase-painting, but it is difficult to be sure which representations are connected with sport and which are not. Given that the scene on side B depicts an athletic subject, it is possible that the horses on side A could be part of an athletic competition as well. Horses played a prominent role in the ancient Greek world, and Xenophon wrote a treatise On Horsemanship in the early fourth century B.C. For a similar scene, see the krater noted above in Boston, Museum of Fine Arts 1973.572, and a column-krater by the Flying-Angel Painter in a Lausanne private collection (Bron, “Chevaux et la danse,” pl. 5). For a horse rendered in a similar way, cf. a column-krater in the manner of Myson in Berlin, Antikensammlung 31404 (*ARV*² 243.4; *Beazley Addenda*² 202; CVA Berlin, Antikensammlung 11 [Germany 86], pls. 5.2, 6.1).

For similar scenes in the palaestra, cf. column-kraters by Myson, Louvre CA 1947 (*ARV*² 240.44; Paralipomena 349; *Beazley Addenda*² 201; CVA Paris, Louvre 2 [France 2], pl. 24, with akontist, aulos player, and jumper), Villa Giulia 1044 (*ARV*² 239.23; CVA Rome, Museo Nazionale di Villa Giulia 2 [Italy 2], pl. 16.1.2, with jumpers and diskobolos), and Villa Giulia 984 (*ARV*² 239.21; CVA Rome, Museo Nazionale di Villa Giulia 2 [Italy 2], pl. 15, with akontist, diskobolos, and jumper). Cf. also the psykter by Oltos in New York, Metropolitan Museum of Art, Rogers Fund, 10.210.18 (*ARV*² 54.7; von Bothmer, “Red-Figured Kylix,” 8–9, figs. 2a–d). For palaestra scenes, see A. Bruckner, “Palästradarstellungen auf frührotfigurigen attischen Vasen” (Ph.D. diss., University of Basel, 1954), esp. pp. 62–69, 70–75 for javelin throwing and jumping respectively; Kyle, Athletics, pp. 50–53; Miller, Ancient Greek Athletics, pp. 60–72, 176–95. See also von Bothmer, “Red-Figured Kylix,” 5–20; S. Karouzou, “Scènes de palestres,” BCH 86 (1962): 430–66. See also D. G. Kyle, Sport and Spectacle in the Ancient World (Oxford, 2007); S. Scenes of javelin throwing belong mainly to palaestra scenes and become common from the last quarter of the sixth century B.C. onward. See Legakis, “Athletic Contests,” pp. 318–55, cat. no. 10; Goossens, Thielemans, and Thas, “Sport Scenes,” pp. 65, 69, 73. For javelin throwing, see E. N. Gardiner, “Throwing the Javelin,” JHS 27 (1907): 249–73; R. Patrucco, Lo Sport nella Grecia antica (Florence, 1972), pp. 171–89; E. N. Javelin throwing and jumping belong to the pentathlon. For the pentathlon, see entry no. 2 (73.AE.135).

The long jump appears frequently on Attic vases after the third quarter of the sixth century B.C. See Goossens, Thielemans, and Thas, “Sport Scenes,” p. 75; Legakis, “Athletic Contests,” pp. 276–317, cat. no. 9.

The haltēres depicted here are of the Archaic type used in the sixth and fifth centuries B.C. Cf. the haltēres on the column-kraters by Myson on Villa Giulia 984 (supra) and Villa Giulia 1044 (supra); the stone haltēres in Athens, National Museum 1926 (Mind and Body, pp. 175–76, no. 66); a black-figure cup close to the Painter of Vatican G69 in Paris, Louvre CP 10376 (ABV 210.3; CVA Paris, Louvre 10 [France 17], pl. 107.3.8); a lekythos by the Bowdoin Painter in Athens, National Museum 17281 (*ARV*² 684.145; CVA Athens, National Museum 2 [Greece 2], pl. 12.6–7); a fragment of a kalpis by the Nikoxenos Painter in an English private collection (*ARV*² 222.24; Robertson, Art of Vase-Painting, p. 118, fig. 119).

For the strigil, see E. Kotera-Feyer, “Die Strigilis in der attisch-rotfigurigen Vasenmalerei: Bildformeln und ihre Deutung,” Nikephoros 11 (1998): 107–36, with earlier bibliography; S. Lorenz, “Nicht nur mit Schwamm und Schaber ...,” in Lockender Lorbeer, pp. 266–69.

For the trainer (paedotribēs), see Kyle, Athletics, pp. 141–45.

Back views, introduced into vase-painting by the Pioneers, are often used by Myson. Cf. the akontists on the column-kraters Louvre CA 1947 (supra) and Villa Giulia 984 (supra); the diskobolos and komast on the column-krater Villa Giulia 1044 (supra); Herakles on the column-krater Florence 3981 (A. M. Esposito and G. de Tommaso, Vasi Attici: Museo Archeologico Nazionale di Firenze Antiquarium [Florence, 1993], p. 55, fig. 76). Cf. also the twisting poses and back views of the athletes in low relief on a kouros base in Athens, National Museum 3476 (A. Stewart, Greek Sculpture [New Haven, 1990], pp. 122–23, figs. 138–40); the boxer on the amphora by the Kleophrades Painter in Munich, Staatliche Antikensammlungen 2305 (*ARV*² 121.3; CVA Munich, Museum Antiker Kleinkunst 4 [Germany 12], pl. 173.1). For the back view of the trainer on B, cf. also the three-quarter back view of the middle komast on the amphora Type A by Euthymides in Munich, Staatliche Antikensammlungen 2307 (*ARV*² 26.1, 1620; Agora 30, p. 86). It is generally accepted that Myson learned to draw in the Pioneer workshop, and his vases recall Phintias, who may have been his master.

For nudity in ancient Greek athletics, see entry no. 2 (73.AE.135).

The hound appears to be fascinated by the athlete with the haltēres, and he attends the training carefully. Dogs, an important element in ancient Greek daily life, often appear in hunting scenes, but they also occur in palaestra, symposia, domestic or funeral contexts, and courtship scenes, without necessarily being an integral part of the composition or the narrative of the scene. It is during the late sixth and early fifth centuries B.C. that they reach the height of their popularity in vase-painting. Cf. a fragmentary volute-krater by the Syriskos Painter in Athens, National Museum ACR.758 (*ARV*² 260.4; Mind and Body, pp. 161–62, no. 47); a black-figure alabastron by the Theseus Painter in Palermo, Collezione Mormino 660 (CVA Palermo, Collezione Mormino, Banco di Sicilia 1 [Italy 50], pl. 19.4–6); a pelike by the Triptolemos Painter in Malibu, J.
